

ABSTRACT

[0037] A method and system of synchronizing a clock in an electronic device having image capture capabilities includes receiving an image of a time keeping device from the electronic device with image capture capabilities, determining a current time using image analysis operations on the image of the time keeping device and setting the current time on a clock associated with the electronic device with image capture capabilities.